

With the ever increasing RF pollution we hams have witnessed in this metropolitan area in the last 20 years, all it will take is BPL to render HF communications useless. It is not clear to me that it is wise to hand this natural resource over to big business. There could be a day when all the cellular and satellite communications are found inadequate in the time of a natural or war disaster.